

*Announcing the open call for practitioner residencies
at The Rockefeller Foundation Bellagio Center on Lake Como.*

The Center's residency program offers a superb opportunity for focused work in a serene environment that brings highly diverse cohorts of artists, academics, practitioners, and policymakers together for up to one month, fostering rich cross-cultural and interdisciplinary exchange. Diversity of culture, thought and practice is a hallmark of the program that has for decades provided residents with unparalleled opportunities to advance their work while gaining exposure to new thinking and ideas as they expand their networks internationally.

The latest news and an overview of programs can be found on the Center's website. All applicants must submit an application using the online application form.

“As a Bellagio resident, I was able to engage with a diverse group of scholars, artists, and policymakers from throughout the world that had a lasting impact on my thinking and ability to advance a fresh strategy for US NGOs.”

– Sam Worthington, Resident Fellow, 2014

Competition Opens: October 1, 2018 • Final Deadline to Submit: December 3, 2018

Successful applicants from this competition will be offered residencies in late 2019 or 2020.
